Stem Cell Preservation:

Cord blood banking involves collecting blood left in your newborn's umbilical cord and placenta and storing it for future medical use. Cord blood contains potentially lifesaving cells called stem cells. (The stem cells in cord blood are different from embryonic stem cells.) Stem cells are the building blocks of the blood and immune system. They have the ability to develop into other types of cells, so they can help repair tissues, organs, and blood vessels and can be used to treat a host of diseases.

Banking & Benefits:

The primary reason for banking your child's cord blood – peace of mind – is one any parent can relate to.

It can be beneficial for

- Less risk of complications when used in transplants
- Ability to use one's own stem cells for conditions that currently lack medical treatment options, also known as "autologous transplantation"
- Immediately available and can minimize disease progression in early treatment
- Preserving them "stops the clock" and protects the cells from aging and being exposed to environmental factors and common viruses that can decrease their function.
