Asia Business Responsibility Summit 2014

The age of responsible business is upon us, if not in terms of practice, then certainly in terms of public expectation. The ongoing financial crisis has made it much more difficult for corporations to maintain a business as usual mentality – on issues from executive pay, to tax avoidance and corruption, as well as the externalisation of social and environmental responsibilities through complex business relationships around the world. At a time when enterprises are increasingly seen as critical components of the social system, they are accountable not merely to their shareholders from a revenue and profitability perspective but also to the larger society which is also its stakeholder. Profit is certainly a lot easier to quantify than something like 'happiness', but the intangible benefits of good, honest business clearly go way beyond pure finance....Must the word 'profit' always refer to money in the strictest sense?
