Dear Students

"The new year stands before us, like a chapter in a book, waiting to be written. We can help write that story by setting goals." - Melody Beattie

The first day of the month of January every year is celebrated as New Year all around the world marking the dawn and fresh beginning of another year of life. The day itself is special as it not only symbolises the start of a new year, it is also filled with a mix of feelings of rejoicing good old memories, forgetting the bad ones and enthusiasm of setting up the new goals for the year ahead. Best said 'Forgetting the past makes you happy; living in present makes you content and aspiring the future makes you successful.'

At various stages in life, we need to start afresh in our pursuit of growth, peace and success. A new start always brings with it new energy and new passion to be all the more energetic to achieve our life goals.

I am sure that this day must have marked the successful innings of your December examinations too. I wish a very prosperous and fulfilling new year.

Happy New Year

Demonetisation and Black Money Economy*

Introduction

The government of India announced a major change in the economic environment on 8th of November 2016 by demonetising the high value currency notes of Rs 500 and Rs 1000 denomination. These two currencies ceased to be legal tender with the government's announcement. Through this step, the government has attempted to simultaneously tackle various issues affecting the economy- a parallel economy, counterfeit currency in circulation and terror financing. It is generally argued that the stock of the black economy in India constitutes a major part of the Gross Domestic Product (GDP). Through the act of demonetisation, even if half of the total amount of black money in the country is withdrawn, it will provide a big boost to the economy. The central bank of the country will get relief on its liabilities and the commercial banks will get deposits that will lead to a rise in the bank deposits and later on there will be decrease in lending rates plus fiscal deficit.

Demonetization is an economic tool to tackle black money. In the world history, there are precedents available where few nations that have tried changing their currency in the past. For instance, Zimbabwe had to demonetize its whopping hundred trillion dollar note that was exchanged in a shocking way dropping trillion dollars to $0.5 dollar. Similarly, Nigeria also attempted demonetisation in 1984. Besides, Zaire and Ghana also demonetised their currency in 1982 and 1990, respectively. Further, around 80% of Myanmar's currency was demonetised in 1987 with an objective to curb black money. Soviet Union, in January 1991, withdrew 50 and 100 ruble notes from circulation in an attempt to remove black money and increase the value of the currency. Recently, North Korea faced demonetisation of currency in 2010.

In case of India, demonetization has taken place twice in the past. India has demonetised high-value currency before, in 1946 and 1978. Rs. 1,000 and higher denomination notes were first demonetised in January 1946 and again in 1978. The move was aimed at tackling the issue of the black money economy. The highest denomination note ever printed by the Reserve Bank of India was the Rs. 10,000 note in 1938 and again in 1954. Not only through demonetisation, India has shown its will to prevent illegitimate income generating activities and to stop generation of black money through a series of policy initiatives since independence. For instance, Voluntary Disclosure Scheme, 1951, economic liberalisation in 1991 and the introduction of several other measures like the Prevention of Money Laundering Act, 2002, all point to the huge size of parallel economy and operation of black money in India as well as the policy makers' intentions to curb this menace. The recent demonetisation in 2016 is another step in the same direction.

Why Demonetisation?

The answer to this question lies in the fact that it is utmost important for an economy to curb the menace of black money and existence of parallel economy. The circulation of black money has an enormous negative impact on the efficient working of an economic system. Its effects are far and wide ranging from existence of dual economy, loss of revenue to the government, under-estimation of the size of economy to lavish consumption spending, deterioration of moral standards in the society etc. Indian economy is not an exception to the phenomenon and has been seen to be adversely affected by the circulation of huge amount of black money.

It is important to understand the general impacts of black money as discussed below:

- The circulation of black money leads to creation of dual economy in the system consisting of a parallel economy operating side by side with the official or reported economy in the country. It adversely affects the income-distribution and legitimate commercial activity in the economy. Those engaging themselves in earning black money earn much more than honest people in various professions and it results in income distribution tilting towards black money activities and creates a parallel economy through illegal activity.
- Black money results in loss of revenue to the government as it leads to large amount of tax evasion on account of underground activities taking place in parallel economy.
- It weakens confidence in the governance system as tax revenue of the government which is collected from tax payers in the country is used for various developmental activities and provision of public services. Those engaged in operating black economy get to enjoy these services without paying taxes for these services as their underground activities cannot be taxed. Therefore, whole burden of tax falls on people operating in white money. This works as a demotivation to honest and hard working individuals in the society and act as a cause for the deterioration of general moral standards of the society.
- The circulation of black money leads to the misdirection of precious and scarce national resources towards non-priority areas (for example, luxury homes, cars etc) and tilts the consumption pattern in the favour of rich and elite at the cost of production of articles for the general masses. It is generally held responsible for leading to the misdirection of productive resources from essential goods to the non-essential goods. Further, since a part of black money is kept in a form that contributes little to productive activities it reduces the resources available for productive activities. The holders of black money also have a tendency to be extravagant and dispose it off on lavish travels and tours, articles of distinction and other means of entertainment. This leads to misuse and abuse of resources. This increases the hardships of many millions in dire need of basic facilities of life as a result of inefficient use of economic resources by black money holders.
- Black money also poses a big challenge to macroeconomic policy makers. Since, the exact size of parallel economy cannot be measured and activities in black money remain underground it leads to the wrong measurement of the size of the economy and thereby undermine the effectiveness of government's policies.
- The black money has developed a culture of corruption and bribes in economy as operators of black money get their illegal activities done by bribing the officials and other institutions in the country. This also causes hardship to masses as they find it difficult to get their work done in a system that has become corrupt.

Conclusion

At various points of time of time in the world, countries have resorted to demonetizing their currencies to tackle black money economy. Demonetisation is considered to be serving a huge and direct blow to black money hoarded in the economy although policy makers differ in their views on the effectiveness of this tool. As the menace of black money in India is huge, the government has recently resorted to demonetisation in 2016 with an objective to tackle parallel economy, counterfeit currency in circulation and terror financing.
