‘Only This Much’
Dear Readers,

The month of March has been an eventful month for the Mysore Chapter. A variety of programs were hosted for the members and students, the details of which are published elsewhere in this issue. It is a matter of concern for all of us that the visibility of the profession is not up to the desired level. Very often, we find that senior faculty of even commerce colleges are not aware of our profession. I am glad to share with you that Mysore chapter has taken various steps in this direction. We have been organizing programs in association with members of Institute of Valuers, Bharatiya Note Mudran Private Limited, Certified Information System Audit etc. to increase the awareness about our profession in all segments of society. Organizing blood donation camp, issuing press notes, inviting dignitaries for chapter programs all contribute significantly to this cause.

Through this column I appeal to the members to help the profession grow by increasing its visibility in their circles.

You will be glad to note that CS. Datla Hanumantha Raju, President of the Institute and other dignitaries have confirmed their visit to Mysore on 25th and 26th of April 2009. A variety of programs have been conceptualized on this occasion, the details of which will be circulated shortly.

Words worth Millions

There are two kinds of failures. Those who think and never do, and those who do and never think.

If you do not stand for something, you will fall for everything.
So far... With the help of simple Ayurvedic principles of life, there exists the possibility of improving your vitality, immunity, power, augmenting physical fitness, improving activity level and restoring the energy reserve of the body. Aahara, Vihaara, Vichara, Dinacharya, Rithucharya are some of such principles which give a better health and improve the quality of life. Based on the aspects of Dinacharya (Daily Regimen), few guidelines are given, which will be of help to you. Guidelines already given for:

- Rising Early:
- Washing one’s face, mouth and eyes:
- Oral Hygiene (DhanthaDhavanam):
- Eye Care(Anjanam):
- Nasal Medication (Nasyam):
- Oil Massage(Abhayangam):
- Exercise (Vajayamam):

Bath (Snanam):
Take bath in warm water after the exercise. Use cold or tepid water for head. Warm water will improve vigour, relieve exertion and give good appetite. Bathing clears pores of the skin. Use green gram powder to scrub the body instead of soap.

Meals:
After a good bath, consume a balanced and nutritious meal. Do not overeat or fast. Avoid spicy and oily food. Take easily digestible food. One should fill the stomach with ½ part food, ¼ part water and leave the balance ¼ part vacant. It is advisable to have breakfast between 7.30 to 8.00 a.m., Lunch between 12 noon to 1 p.m., Dinner around 7.30 p.m.

Activities after meals:
Taking ‘Thamboolam’ –betel leaves along with Cardamom, Areca Nuts, Nutmeg and Chunna (Calcium), without tobacco, after meals is good for digestion and heart function. Also, this is mouth freshening. People with pitha and vatha diseases should not do Thamboola sevanam. Walk at least 100 yards after meals. Avoid bathing, swimming, driving or body exertion after meals.

Drinking Hot water:
A glass of hot water in the morning clears the digestive tract and cleanses the kidneys. It also stimulates intestinal activities. Starting the day with tea or coffee is not recommended. Habit of bed coffee/tea has a weakening effect on the kidneys.

Posture:
Maintain a straight and up right posture while sitting or walking. The energy within the body rises up throughout the spine, which helps you to be pleasant and alert.

Practicing certain habits:
Certain positive qualities in one’s life and personality can be termed as ‘Dharma Vrithi’:

- Do a profession, which is noble, respected, beneficial to you and the Society.
- Be humble, charitable, enthusiastic and perform holy duties. Spend time in the company of good people and follow the scriptures.
- Avoid ‘dashavidha papas’ like cruelty to other living beings, stealing, unlawful sex, backbiting, telling lies, hard speech, hatred, jealousy, misunderstanding and faithlessness in God.
- Take light meals in the night and sleep well by keeping your head in east or south direction.
- Recollect the events of the day. Thank God and Nature for taking care of you.
- Never suppress urges of flatus, faeces, urine, thirst, hunger, sleep, vomiting, cough
- One should adopt what is best for the life.

In conclusion, Ayurveda emphasizes on ways to promote health rather than just treat the diseases. The aim is to maintain health of healthy people and cure diseases of the sick people. Ayurvedic therapies and treatments offer excellent possibilities of regaining strength, well being and balanced frame of mind. This ancient form of Indian Medical system envisages the person as the sum of body, mind and soul.

The theories and principles of Ayurveda constitutes a path towards Healthy Life.

Disclaimers and Fine Prints in the Era of CRM

Anand Wadadekar, M.Com, M.A (Eco), MBA, DIT, Pune, Maharashtra

Consumers/Customers/Investors like you and I must have surely come across something called 'Fine Prints and Disclaimers' - which can be found in each and every agreement, contract, sale and purchase transactions, etc. In a layman's language, Fine Print means, the terms and conditions relating to a particular transaction, which are needed to be understood before entering into a transaction or else, one may face serious losses. It’s called by that name because these small conditions are typed or written in small and fine print type. Disclaimers mean, the declaration of non-claiming of responsibility by the other party to the transaction in the event of loss due to lack of knowledge on the part of the investor or first party to the transaction. Though sounding simple, in reality, this is not so. Fine Prints means the terms and conditions in Print that do not leave the prospective investor / customer / consumer in a Fine or Happy state. Disclaimers mean the declaration, which holds responsible the investor / consumer solely for his / her contractual deeds and actions.

We come across the first disclaimer at the start of the day i.e. when we go to purchase 'milk'. If you are new to the vendor, he says 'Doodh kharab hua to hamari jimmedari nahi (If the milk gets spoiled, we are not responsible and milk will not be compensated)'. Same kind of disclaimers and fine prints are observed in our day to day life, only the degree of severity is different or more or less damaging.

Take the case of the print media (Newspapers, magazines). It says, "Views expressed in the articles are solely of the author. The Editor does not necessarily subscribe to them" or "Views expressed are personal" or "Neither the publisher nor the Editor, nor the Printer will be responsible for any damage or loss to anybody arising out of any error or omission in the issue" or "We do not own any responsibility legally or otherwise for correctness of the same."

Take the case of educational institutions, admission to courses, etc. Here also disclaimers are found. For example, "Fees once paid will not be refunded or transferred" or "We will not be responsible for non-delivery or non-receipt of forms sent through postal authorities or courier". In Fine Print, we can find "The courses are not recognized or approved by UGC or AICTE".

Same is the case when we buy some consumer durables or eatables. Here we come across something like "Goods once sold will not be taken back or exchanged" or "Rules are liable to change without prior notice and intimation".

It applies to Fine Prints. The terms and conditions of a concerned advertisement, offer, sale, etc. is written in so small letter fonts that it's literally difficult to read them with naked eyes. Such information is so important that, it should be actually written in visible fonts and should be given more emphasis. If the reader misses out to read the Fine prints, then it is for sure that he will find himself in soup and it would be too late to protest.

Surprisingly these Fine Prints and Disclaimers are believed to be a part of Customer Relationship Management. Is this exploitation in the name of CRM, a good management concept? Probably, the answer lies in a certain concept explained in the Sale of Goods Act, 1930. The concept speaks about the responsibility when buying or purchasing goods. It's called 'Caveat Emptor Rule'. This means "Let the buyer beware". By reading these numerous disclaimers, one can conclude that, this concept is being misused for nothing but holding the buyer solely responsible for the transaction. Though the Rule has few exceptions, it's very difficult to prove them.

From the sellers' perspective, it has to be accepted that, if the sellers do not resort to the Fine Prints and Disclaimers it will be a mess for them to handle the litigations arising. According to those resorting to disclaimers and fine prints, there are approximately 35% of the total customers who look for a chance to claim service and benefit and take undue advantage if such disclaimers and fine prints are not mentioned. The sad part is, due to this 35%, the remaining genuine consumers suffer.

The after sale service contracts have probably, the maximum number of fine prints and disclaimers. After reading those, it's for sure that, the customers would not feel up to going back to their seller, in case of a defect, instead purchase a new item. These disclaimers only hold the concerned customer responsible for any fault in the item or service and agree to satisfy the customer only when the customer has satisfied its numerous 'ifs' and 'only'. It's also true that, all Disclaimers and Fine Prints may not be necessarily legal. This is an extreme use of the Caveat Emptor Rule by the sellers just to avoid responsibility.

Any customer service will be satisfactory only when the Disclaimers and Fine Prints are reduced to minimum and the conditions will be 'open' than 'hidden'. Customer Relationship Management will prove its real meaning and worth only then.
Copyright for Music Recording and Playing

If we think of music then we should think of the musicians also. What is the protection for their art? Legally what protection they can expect to there work? To promote the development in this sector there are two organizations which are recognized by Government of India to provide licenses under the Copyrights Act, 1957 to the work of musicians. One is The Indian Performing Right Society Limited (IPRS) and the other is Phonographic Performance Limited (PPL-India). PPL is mainly engaged in Administering the Broadcasting / Telecasting and Public Performance Rights on behalf of over 139 music companies which are its members. According to IPRS website, “The business of IPRS is to issue Licences to users of music and collect Royalties from them; for and on behalf of its Members i.e. the Authors, the Composers and the Publishers of Music and distribute this Royalty amongst them after deducting its administrative costs. The IPRS came into existence on 23rd August 1969. The Society is a non-profit making Organisation and is a Company Limited by Guarantee and Registered under the Companies Act, 1956. It is also registered under Section 33 of the Copyright Act, 1957 as the Only Copyright Society in the Country to do business of issuing Licenses for usage of Music.

To promote the development in Music sector the Copyrights Act, 1957 has made it mandatory for all those who play Pre-recorded music in the form of Gramophone Records, Music cassettes or CDs in public places to take prior permission from the Copyright Society for Sound Recordings.

There is a provision in Copyrights Act that it is mandatory for all those who play Pre-recorded music in the form of Gramophone Records, Music cassettes or CDs in public places to take prior permission from the Copyright Society for Sound Recordings, these two organizations are listed in the Copyrights Society to provide such permission.

The primary work of these two organizations is:

Providing license: The Societies grants blanket Licenses for a moderate annual charge, which enables the holders thereof to comply with the provisions of the Copyright Act, 1957

Protection of members: Any performance of Indian or International music from Sound Recordings of the members in Public Places or Commercial Establishments such as Hotels, Restaurants, Cinema Halls, Discotheques etc, without first having obtained a License from these organizations, constitutes an Infringement of copyright under The Copyright Act of 1957. Such violation of copyright is Cognizable & Non-bail able offence, attracting heavy Penalties.

For more details visit: www.pplindia.org and www.iprs.org.

Europe split on music copyright extension

Music performers’ and producers’ hopes of getting extended royalties in Europe in the near future have been dealt a blow because of the inability of European Union countries to agree on lengthening the copyright terms for music recordings. Diplomats in Brussels said that a sufficient number of states had been opposed to legislative proposals which are currently in the pipeline to constitute a “blocking minority” – with the result that the issue was not put to a vote in ambassadorial meetings this week.

Patent suit accuses Microsoft of infringing on updating tech

According to an 87-page PDF file on BackWeb Technologies' website, the Israeli firm is accusing Microsoft of using its technologies in key components of Windows Update, Windows Server Update Services, Microsoft Update, and other Microsoft update technologies. BackWeb, which has US offices in San Jose, California, filed its lawsuit in San Francisco federal court last week, charging that Microsoft's Background Intelligent Transfer Service (BITS) infringes on four of its patents, granted between 1999 and 2003.

Commercial and Legal Standing of EDs vis-à-vis NEDs

CS. U Padma Shenoy
Company Secretary, Totem Infrastructure Limited, Hyderabad

Practically, Non-executive Director means any director who is not paid a salary. However, the Managing Director is termed as an Executive Director, even if he is not entitled for any salary emoluments. Is there actually any significant difference between the Executive Director and the Non-Executive Director?

Many companies practice to designate employees as Executive Directors, who are actually not on the Board of the company. In the absence of clear definitions in the Companies Act, 1956, generally, any employee who is also a Director is called an Executive Director. However, according to the regulatory requirements, an Executive Director is an individual holding managerial position and bestowed with decision-making powers for his whole-time service to the company. Further, Form 25C is required to be submitted for appointing a person as Whole-time Directors and the same is not required for Executive Directors.

Explanation to section 197A, makes clear that a Non-Executive Director does not undertake to devote his whole working time to the company. Whereas an Executive Director extends his professional service to the company. The latest trend in the corporate sector is the appointment of an “Associate Director”, who may or may not be part of Board. As the company cannot induct all the top Executives to the Board or designate them as Whole-time Directors, the idea of a new roles like Chief Officers was initiated.

In the absence of any provision in the Articles of Association of the company, the Non-Executive Director is not obligated to tender his resignation to the Board and seek the acceptance from the Board. To ward off any future complications, he may send a copy of the resignation to the relevant Registrar of Companies.

Remuneration:

1. The company can pay up to 1% of its profits as remuneration to the Non-Executive Director without breaching the provisions of Schedule XIII, as the this Schedule makes provisions for the remuneration to be paid to Managing Director, Whole-Time Director and Executive Director.

2. Also, in case there is more than one Executive Director, then as per Schedule XIII the total managerial remuneration should not exceed 10% of the profits. However, the corresponding tabular representation should be followed for each individual separately as per the terms of the appointment.

3. An approval from the Central Government is required if the remuneration paid to the Non-Executive Director exceeds the limit set forth in Schedule XIII. If any Director holds any key responsibilities in the company, the prime test for payment of remuneration would be to check whether such Director be considered as a Non-Executive Director; because by virtue of the nature of work, such Director will be automatically treated as an Executive Director.

4. Only a Whole-time Director or an Executive Director is eligible for Sweat Equity Shares (Sec 79A)

5. The premium paid by the company on "Employer - Employee Insurance Policy" for its Executive Directors will be treated as perquisite.

Conclusion:

However, in practice the appointment of Non-Executive Independent Director has become an arrangement of convenience with the idea of “Good Corporate Governance” going for a toss. Unless such Independent Directors have significant stakes in the company, it will be naive to assume that they would be allowed / willing to assert their independence. When Non-Executive Directors get attractive remuneration they would not jeopardize this opportunity by being too assertive or independent in real sense. Also, only directors with real involvement will take active interest in the affairs of the company and contribute to its obligations to shareholders, employees, customers, suppliers, etc.
When we hear the word ‘life cycle’, what comes to our mind is the life cycle of a butterfly that we studied in our school days. The life cycle of a butterfly is so fascinating that the phenomenon makes everyone gape with wonder. Where life cycle of butterfly is having a span of one generation, in case of certain birds, it extends to two-three generations. Current generation bird starts migrating to another part of the world. On the way, these birds stop, lay eggs and nurture the young ones. By the time the fledglings are ready to fly, the parent birds’ lives end. New birds continue the journey and reach other part of the world and give birth to third generation. These third generation birds start migrating back to its original location. However, on the way back, these birds give birth to fourth generation and finally forth generation reaches back the original destination! Again, next generation bird starts migrating!

We have a general impression that human beings do not have the life cycle. We feel that we only evolve, evolve and evolve. However, we have seen from the history that man has built many big civilizations and because of his own mistakes ruined everything! Dynasties rose and fell. Again somewhere new civilization is built – again mistakes – again ruining! Is this not a life cycle? Some times, it may extend to several generations; some times, it may get over within one generation.

Whether organisations are also having life cycle?

We ‘know’ that ups and downs are natural and normal to an organisation. There are profits in some years and no profits or losses in some years. Every one would nod his head in agreement to this universal phenomenon. However, the question is, does it happen ‘naturally’ or because of human errors?

You might have heard people talking about cost cutting initiatives in organisations. Whenever company enters loss zone or slow growth zone, the chanting of cost cutting mantra begins. Every activity comes under scanner to find its usefulness for the organisation. Do we need these many people? Do we need these many activities? Do we need to organise these events? Why should we rent a five star hotel for this meeting? Can we redesign the employee pick up and drop routes? Can we negotiate better with external service providers? So on and so forth! You might have also heard that lots of reports are being asked by ‘head quarter’, lots of analysis are being done, it has become so hectic these days…..

One can understand easily that even during good times of an organisation, these expenses and activities should have been questioned; these analysis should have been carried out on a routine basis. May be organisation would have stayed healthy! However, during good times we allow the growth of the flab. When diseases warn us, we start doing everything possible to cut fat. If do not listen to such early warnings, fat may end our lives.

Whatever is true for human being is also true for organizations, as organisations are made up of human beings. When organisation starts making profit, every one slowly forget the systems, analysis and usefulness of every rupee spent. This leads to failure in the business. Many companies get up when early warnings are seen and start tightening the loose ends. Those who ignore early warnings certainly end up in crash!

By tightening loose ends, and by chasing the new targets, organisation will come back to prosperity again. However, once prosperity starts showing up, tightened ends slowly starts loosen. Cycle continues.

Whether being alert and disciplined always is unnatural for us? …!
Selfari - Where Books are in Plenty

For organizing ideas.

Amitkumar Hegde, B.Com, MCA

Normally, Brainstorming sessions come up with varied ideas and opinions on any given topic. In this case arranging the ideas and data is done with a technique called “Affinity Diagrams”. This technique is commonly used in project management where in large number of ideas to be sorted in to different categories for review and analysis. Affinity diagramming typically involves a group of people gathering in a room, writing down individual ideas or observations on post-it notes, pasting the notes on a wall or whiteboard, and then arranging the notes into meaningful groups.

StickySorter, a Microsoft Office Labs sponsored spare-time project, which was developed to solve a problem encountered in a project. You can achieve the following with MS StickySorter:

- Organize ideas into named groups, which can easily be rearranged and manipulated.
- Create custom views of data imported from spreadsheets or directly entered in the application.
- Create and manage large collections of notes.
- Display structured information on a note.

Yoga Asanas & Meditation

N.A. Srinivasan,
Sr. Manager (Legal) & Company Secretary, Cetex Petrochemicals Limited

I am practicing Yoga Asanas and Meditation for the last 15 years. From my experience, I wish to give my inputs. Practicing Yoga and Meditation is more of a discipline. Many people learn it, but only a few practice it regularly and continually.

Generally most of us think that it is a One-Stop-Solution for all our physical and mental ailments. In addition, we expect quick results, which is why many times people shift from one technique to another, only to get disappointed. Whatever is the method of practice, everything gives almost the same result, if practiced regularly. Regular practice of Yoga and Meditation, helps our body and mind to align with nature, i.e. which helps us to approach our life in a balanced and natural way. This removes the accumulation of stresses and strains in our body and mind which help in healing or preventing many of the ailments. Whether one is home-maker or a corporate professional, same principle shall be applied. One has to systematically allot some time everyday according to their nature of work and practice it regularly. Adhere to the following three basic principles:

1. Choose an appropriate Guru and learn.
2. Don't expect quick results.
3. Practise regularly

Can a Trust hold shares in its name?

No. Only trustees can hold shares on behalf of trust. Section 153 of the Companies Act, 1956 provides that no notice of any trust, express, implied or constructive shall be entered on the register of members or of debenture holders. Section 20 and Section 40 of The Industrial Trust Act, 1882 provides for investment by the Trustee on behalf of the Trust. It will also be subject to any direction in the instrument of trust, if any. Regulation 6 of Table A to Schedule I also provides for the same.

Studying Hard is important but ‘Studying Smart’ is Essential!!

The curriculum of the CS course is indeed very comprehensive. Several subjects have been bifurcated into two or three segments. Optimize on such bifurcations. For instance: Paper 3 of Executive program, Tax Laws has three parts – Direct Taxes, Service Tax and Value Added Tax carrying 60, 20 and 20 marks respectively. Part B and Part C put together cover only two topics. Thus, an extensive study of these two topics will enable you to pocket 40 marks very easily. Part A may be covered subsequently to secure maximum marks. So, get your smart preparations going !!

Did You Know?

It’s Election Fever everywhere! The first phase of polling of the 15th Lok Sabha elections commencing tomorrow (April 16) and here is some interesting facts about Elections:
