Newly Qualified Members of The ICSI after the CONVOCATION 2012

Nesar Ahmad, President, the ICSI in his address while congratulating the newly admitted members, meritorious students of the CS Course, their parents and teachers, spoke about the importance of continuous learning and advised all young professionals to have a craving for learning with application of knowledge towards professional success in tandem with societal expectations. Nesar Ahmad also informed about the new initiatives of the Institute towards the growth and development of the profession.

S N Ananthasubramanian, Vice President, the ICSI, in his address said that young Company Secretaries are looked upon as effective transformers of the profession by learning from, listening about, experiencing from and foreseeing the changing environment. Expressing that learning requires time and effort, as well as the urge to learn, he observed that the emerging global scenario and the internet have shrunk the world to a global village and that young Company Secretaries must offer value added services and re-engineer themselves to exceed the expectations of stakeholders.

N K Jain Secretary & CEO, The ICSI while making concluding remarks and proposing a vote of thanks, congratulated all the newly admitted members and meritorious students. He emphasised that the perception of business towards Company Secretaries has been changing over a period of time as the portfolio of the profession has expanded beyond company law. He advised the young professionals to keep pace with the increased technological advancements, respond to the speed of change and innovation, meet with rising quality standards, satisfy accelerated demands and above all to perform, exceeding the expectations.

Earlier, Rajiv Bajaj, Chairman, NIRC of ICSI in his welcome address said that education and opportunities have created unprecedented social and economic mobility. There is a revolution of expectations and the surge of aspirations in an increasingly young India. He reiterated that while there should be pride in successes, there is also need to be conscious of challenges ahead. He advised the young professionals to consistently develop their physical, emotional, psychological and mental levels.
