“Excellence is never an accident; it is the result of high intention, sincere effort, intelligent direction, skilful execution and the vision to see obstacles as opportunities.”

Dear Students,

The stepping stone of becoming a professional, irrespective of the stream or arena is to become a student of the educational qualification required to be attained for the same. But what really makes a person a true professional comes down to the fact, as to how they nurture the student inside them, all their life.

If one truly aims to attain excellence in professional career, then endeavours on continuous basis are to be invested for striving excellence.

If you were to ask me as to what in my opinion would be the broad course of action required to be undertaken for attaining excellence in professional endeavours; the answer would lie in some of the basic habits that we adopt in our daily lives. Reading, assimilating, and even further applying the accumulated wisdom in the right way is what comes across as a simple yet effective way to ensure attainment of the desired results.

Abiding by the quote above, success is nothing but the resultant of continuous and consistent efforts in the right direction. For it is this continuity and consistency, that lends substance to success and builds both character and integrity and it is these traits that are truly and highly valued in the professional world.
CSEET or the CS Executive Entrance Test may come across as a test of four subjects only, but in true sense it is the test of a student's aptitude, attitude, perseverance, grit and above all the zeal to embark on the journey of becoming a Company Secretary. It is this very stage itself which requires portrayal of true professionalism, even before undertaking the roles attached to the profession.

That said, I truly hope and believe that each one of you has the makings of a Governance Professional in its true sense and essence. Yet I expect nothing less than dedicated efforts and performance of the highest standard from all of you.

My best wishes to you in your future endeavours!!!

With warm regards,

(CS Nagendra D. Rao)

Importance of a Business Letter*

Introduction

Letter is an indispensable tool of communication in business. Business letters are used to sell the products, make inquiries about customers or prices of goods, seek information and advice, maintain good public relation, increase goodwill and perform a variety of other business functions. With the continuous growth of commerce and industry, usefulness and importance of business letter are also increasing gradually.

Broad Coverage of Business Letters and their Forms- Internal and External Stakeholders

A business organisation has both internal as well as external stakeholders. The contents and types of business letters varies for internal and external stakeholders. In the ensuing paragraphs, the broad coverage of business letters and their forms for internal stakeholders, i.e., employees and external stakeholders, i.e. current and prospective clients, vendors and the public have been discussed.

1. Employees

   A company's internal communication is its correspondence between the business and its employees. Employee letters can be formal in tone or casual depending on the preferences and style of company's management and are integral in keeping all those within a company on the same page and on track to meeting their goals. Memoranda, project proposals, retirement and resignation letters, and recommendation letters are examples of correspondence between employees and their employers.

2. Current and Prospective Clients

   Businesses often aim to let their current and potential clients know about new offers, services, specials and discounts in order to keep or pique their interest. Sales letters are one option to accomplish this goal. An effective sales letter should be concise, keep a friendly tone, and entice people to buy or learn more about a company's offerings. It should also include photos of the product. In the case of electronic sales letters, such as email newsletters or website postings, it may help to include video and audio. Other types of business letters to clients are the credit letter, adjustment letter and the inquiry response, which is meant to resolve questions, concerns and complaints and is a vital part of customer service.

3. Vendors

Vendors and suppliers are an important link between a company and its customers. It is important that a business communicate regularly with these intermediaries. However, businesses should keep the communication as brief as possible to make sure the message is clear and to avoid wasting both the company’s and the supplier’s time. One of the most important types of letters between businesses and suppliers is the purchase order, also known as an order letter. These letters detail what a company intends to buy, the terms of payment, expected date of arrival or shipment, and return information. Either the company or its vendor can initiate this type of correspondence.

4. The Public

Members of the company occasionally send businesses correspondence inquiring about a company’s background, asking for clarification about media coverage, or to express their feelings about the company’s ethics, policies and procedures. To respond to these inquiries, companies will send an acknowledgement letter. Acknowledgments are akin to receipts in that they inform the inquirer that the company has received his inquiry. Acknowledgments are short and formal and provide a time frame for when the inquirer can expect a response. An acknowledgement may be phrased as succinctly as: “Thank you for your inquiry. We will respond via email within the next two business days.”

Essentials of a Good Business Letter

(1) Correctness: A letter must be correct in every respect, especially in appearance and form of layout, in grammar, spelling and use of language and in the information it conveys. Poor and untidy appearance, with mistakes in typing, too many corrections, uneven spacing or carelessness in the layout, creates a poor impression of the company’s efficiency in handling its work. Incorrect language spoils the message, distracts the reader’s attention and harms the image of the sender.

(2) Completeness: Completeness is dependent upon correctness. A letter is complete when it presents all the necessary ideas which are as under:

(a) Correctness of details, i.e., it is necessary that the facts presented in a business letter are correct. One should not transmit any message unless one is absolutely sure of its correctness. If your message involves any legal matter, you should know the correct legal position before you commit anything.

(b) Correctness of time, i.e., all messages must be transmitted and responded at the most appropriate time. Outdated information involves wastage of time, money and human resources.

(c) Correctness of language, i.e., the letter should be correct from the language point of view. It means that the writer should be careful in spelling, grammar and other aspects of language use.

(d) Correctness of format, i.e., the writer of a business letter should be careful about format. It means all the parts of structure of a business letter should be placed properly. Incorrect format creates wrong impression in the mind of the reader.
(3) Clearness: The message of the letter must be clear at the first reading. Clearly written messages avoid misunderstandings and also save time. Clearness depends upon four factors:

   a) The words should be simple, common, everyday words which everyone can understand. There should not be excessive use of technical words. Such words should be avoided when writing to persons who do not have technical knowledge.

   b) The sentence should be simple and short. Long sentences confuse the readers and often confuse the writer also. Phrases and clauses should not be added to a sentence.

   c) Punctuation marks helps to provide pauses and stops, to break up groups of words into readable units.

   d) Giving definite and concrete details with figures and names is an important factor in clarity. Clarity can be achieved only if the writer of the letter is clear in his mind, about the purpose of writing the letter. In order to have clarity in business letter, the writer of the letter should try to ascertain the answers of the following three crucial questions - i) What is the objective of communication? ii) What is to be communicated and iii) Which medium will prove to be the most suitable for this purpose?

(4) Conciseness/ comprehensiveness:

Conciseness means expressing much in a few words; using as few words as possible. In business writing it means keeping to the point, without sacrificing clarity or courtesy. Conciseness can be achieved by,

   - Leaving out unnecessary words
   - Leaving out unnecessary details
   - Reducing unimportant ideas and phrases to single words, if possible.

(5) Courtey:

In business, we must create friendliness with all those to whom we write. A well-mannered and courteous person shows consideration and thought for others. Courtesy demands friendly behaviour towards others. In a letter, the style, the manner and the choice of words reflect the courtesy of the write. The following principles enable us to achieve courtesy.

   i) Answer the letters on time.
   ii) Avoid using irritating expressions.
   iii) Apologise sincerely for an omission and thank generously for a favour.

(6) Coherence:

Coherence means logical connection between different parts of a business letter. In other words all the paragraphs of a business letter should be contributory to one another. Usually a business letter is divided in three paragraphs. Coherence means the first paragraph should lead the reader to the second paragraph and accordingly the second paragraph should lead the reader to the third paragraph.
Thus, there is a chain like connection between three paragraphs of business letters. Coherence can be achieved only if the writer is clear in his mind, as to what he wants to communicate. Secondly he must have good command over language. All three paragraphs should look like parts of a single whole rather than individual unit. Moreover, the ideas expressed in a letter should be logically connected.

(7) Character:

Here character means individuality. A business letter should reflect the personality of the writer. A business letter written by one person is different from a letter written by another person. This difference is due to difference in personality. Each and every person selects words and phrases according to his own personality. Business letter should not be written in stereotypical manner.

A stereotype letter fails to attract the reader to go through the entire letter. It also fails to create desirable effect upon the mind of the reader. The reader should come to know about the personality of the writer as soon as he completes the letter.

(8) Cheerfulness:

A business letter projects the personality of the writer. In other words, it carries moods, nature, likes and dislikes of the writer. A business letter written in a sad mood fails to create effect on the reader’s mind. The writer should select the appropriate time and condition to write a letter. A letter should be written in a cheerful mood.

Conclusion

A business letter may make or mar a business organisation’s goodwill. It is essential that utmost care is taken while drafting a business letter. It is to be remembered that a business letter is a vital link between a business organisation and its stakeholders. In this world of severe competition when business organisations are striving hard to secure a substantial market share for their products, robust business letters along with other factors influencing the production and sale of products can play a pivotal role in enhancing profitability and sustainability of the business organisations.

1. Government amends Insurance Ombudsman Rules for better resolution of policyholders’ complaints regarding insurance service deficiencies

The Government on 2nd March 2021 notified comprehensive amendments to the Insurance Ombudsman Rules, 2017, with a view to improve the working of the Insurance Ombudsman mechanism to facilitate resolution of complaints regarding deficiencies in insurance services in a timely, cost-effective and impartial manner.

The amended rules have enlarged the scope of complaints to Ombudsmen from only disputes earlier to deficiencies in service on the part of insurers, agents, brokers and other intermediaries. Further, insurance brokers have been brought within the ambit of the Ombudsman mechanism, by empowering the Ombudsmen to pass awards against insurance brokers as well.

Under the amended rules, the timeliness and cost-effectiveness of the mechanism has been substantially strengthened. Policyholders will now be enabled for making complaints electronically to the Ombudsman and a complaints management system will be created to enable policyholders to track the status of their complaints online. Further, the Ombudsman may use video-conferencing for hearings. To enable access to relief through the Ombudsman mechanism even when there is vacancy in the office of a particular Ombudsman, provision has been made for giving additional charge to another Ombudsman, pending the filling of the vacancy.

A number of amendments have been made for securing the independence and integrity of the Ombudsman selection process, while also building in safeguards to secure the independence and impartiality of the appointed persons while serving as Ombudsmen. Further, the selection committee will now include an individual with a track record of promoting consumer rights or advancing the cause of consumer protection in the insurance sector.

The Ombudsman mechanism was administered by the Executive Council of Insurers, which has been renamed as the Council for Insurance Ombudsmen.

Based on the given passage answer questions 3 to 7

Maharana Pratap ruled over Mewar only for 25 years. However, he accomplished so much grandeur during his reign that his glory surpassed the boundaries of countries and time turning him into an immortal personality. He along with his kingdom became a synonym for valour, sacrifice and patriotism. Mewar had been a leading Rajput kingdom even before Maharana Pratap occupied the throne.

Kings of Mewar, with the cooperation of their nobles and subjects, had established such traditions in the kingdom, as augmented their magnificence despite the hurdles of having a smaller area under their command and less population. There did come a few thorny occasions when the flag of the kingdom seemed sliding down. Their flag once again heaved high in the sky thanks to the gallantry and brilliance of the people of Mewar.

The destiny of Mewar was good in the sense that barring a few kings, most of the rulers were competent and patriotic. This glorious tradition of the kingdom almost continued for 1500 years since its establishment, right from the reign of Bappa Rawal. In fact only 60 years before Maharana Pratap, Rana Sanga drove the kingdom to the pinnacle of fame. His reputation went beyond Rajasthan and reached Delhi.

Two generations before him, Rana Kumbha had given a new stature to the kingdom through victories and developmental work. During his reign, literature and art also progressed extraordinarily. Rana himself was inclined towards writing and his works are read with reverence even today. The ambience of his kingdom was conducive to the creation of high quality work of art and literature. These accomplishments were the outcome of a longstanding tradition sustained by several generations.
The life of the people of Mewar must have been peaceful and prosperous during the long span of time; otherwise such extraordinary accomplishment in these fields would not have been possible. This is reflected in their art and literature as well as their loving nature. They compensate for lack of admirable physique by their firm but pleasant nature. The ambience of Mewar remains lovely thanks to the cheerful and liberal character of its people.

One may observe astonishing pieces of workmanship not only in the forts and palaces of Mewar but also in public utility buildings. Ruins of many structures which are still standing tall in their grandeur are testimony to the fact that Mewar was not only the land of the brave but also a seat of art and culture.

Amidst aggression and bloodshed, literature and art flourished and creative pursuits of literature and artists did not suffer. Imagine, how glorious the period must have been when the Vijaya Stambha which is the sample of our great ancient architecture even today, was constructed. In the same fort, Kirti Stambha is standing high, reflecting how liberal the then administration was which allowed people from other communities and kingdoms to come and carry out construction work.

It is useless to indulge in the debate whether the Vijaya Stambha was constructed first or the Kirti Stambha. The fact is that both the capitals are standing side by side and reveal the proximity between the king and the subjects of Mewar.

The cycle of time does not remain the same. Whereas the reign of Rana Sanga was crucial in raising the kingdom to the acme of glory, it also proved to be his nemesis. History took a turn. The fortune of Mewar — the land of the brave — started waning. Rana tried to save the day with his acumen which was running against the stream and the glorious traditions for sometime.
